Dear Mr Davies,

Thank you for your letter of 10 September about the Transport Safety Commission report and the enclosed copy of the Commission's report UK Transport Safety: Who is Responsible?

As a new government we are taking a fresh look at how to address road safety issues. Strategic direction is being discussed and developed currently and the Government is of course looking at occupational road safety within its wider Road Safety review.

I appreciate the work of the Commission and welcome their views on what more the Department could be doing to improve road safety. I am also happy to hear you intend to invite the Department to the one day seminar with key stakeholders as I want to see all appropriate organisations working together to help improve road safety.

*Yours sincerely,
Andrew Jones*
