Research & Events for Roads Policing

PACTS is at the forefront of roads policing research and advocacy. Our report Roads policing and its implications for road safety was widely welcomed and feeds directly into the joint review of roads policing by the DfT, Home Office and NPCC.

We work closely but independently with experts in policing, industry and academia. Our mission is to provide research and evidence to influence government policy and help the police and their partners to save lives on the road. We are pleased to be a member of NRPOI.

We bring together practitioners, stakeholders, academics and politicians at our conferences, webinars and working parties. Recent conferences addressed collision investigation, enforcement and post-crash response. Feedback says they are stimulating, useful and enjoyable!

Key Issues for Roads Policing

PACTS' priorities are to highlight the importance of enforcement as a key component of the safe system approach to road safety, to promote it as a policing priority and to help it secure resources commensurate with the scale of public harm involved

"The Met is proud to work alongside PACTS who we consider a valued partner in our ambition to eradicate collisions. Their genuine determination, knowledge and experience is vital in informing national roads policing strategy and operations; for instance championing the issue of not wearing seatbelts leading to legislative debate and more recently their review of national roads policing. I look forward to our continued effective joint work."

Andy Cox

Detective Superintendent, Roads and Transport Policing Command

"We have found membership of PACTS to be very valuable to the SW Peninsula Road Safety Partnership. They keep us informed about UK Government and international road safety policy and research. PACTS produce excellent research documents drawing evidence and practice from across the globe. The recent report is an important addition to our understanding of police enforcement. Membership of PACTS provides excellent value for money and I would recommend it to any organisation wishing to improve the safety of road users."
